AgroExpoSiberia

November 10 - 12, 2021

Expocentre

Novosibirsk, Russia

The Market

Novosibirsk is the economic center of the southern Siberia. The region accounts for 25.5% of the total area of Russia and 10.4% of the country's agricultural production. The Altai region, immediately south of Novosibirsk, is one of the largest grain producers in the Russian Federation. On her agricultural area of 11.6 million hectares, mainly cereals and pulses are grown, together with forage crops and vegetables. The region is also an important center of milk and meat production.

Numerous state investment projects are currently being started in southern Siberia. From January to November 2020 alone, farmers from Novosibirsk region received 2.5 billion rubles. The modernization process of the farms is in full swing. More than 1,700 new agricultural machines were sold in the region in 2020. The interest of domestic and foreign producers in the region is also very high due to the still great growth potential and the proximity to the agricultural markets of Central and South Asia.

The Exhibition

Next November, AgroExpoSiberia will be held in parallel to the established regional trade fair "Siberian Agricultural Week" in Novosibirsk, the economic center of Siberia.

At the last „Siberian Agricultural Week“ in 2019, no less than 270 manufacturers and suppliers presented a wide range of new machinery, technologies and services for crop production and animal husbandry to appr. 7000 trade visitors from the region and the neighboring countries of Kazakhstan and Mongolia. In addition, there will now be also the exhibitors and visitors of AgroExpoSiberia, which took place in Barnaul until 2019.

After an exhibition pause of almost two years, exhibitors and visitors of both events will benefit from a common platform in late autumn 2021. As usual, important questions of regional agriculture will be discussed in a forum accompanying the fair.
