SIPSA-FILAHA LAUNCHES AFRIKA AGROFOOD! FOR A BETTER VALORISATION OF THE AFRICAN AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION.

It is the agri-food industries that push agricultural production upwards by stimulating the demand for basic agricultural raw materials. In order to meet Africa's food needs, the processing sector plays a fundamental role in the growth of production in agricultural sectors. In some cases, the Agri-Food Industries put in place eviction effects of basic raw materials that are too exclusively export-oriented to better channel them to national markets. Thus, additional value chains are injected locally, supporting internalised growth that is more profitable for everyone.

This new dynamic can lead to the realisation of growth levers for the benefit of African Nations who are intelligently embarking on Afrika agrofood. These are the trends that need to be identified and encouraged in order to make Africa more self-sufficient in terms of food security by putting in place, where possible, such achievements. This is the Afrika Agrofood attitude!

For agricultural productions that experience agricultural overproduction, the knowledge of economy very often makes it possible to open up new paths to food progress. The beneficial effects of cassava, millet, yam, taro, macabo must then be extended by African inventiveness which has no limits as the continent's youth is creative, curious, inventive in order to develop agri-food processes adapted to the specificities of their varied productions. These are the issues that constitute the debate's heart of a modern and ambitious African agriculture. This is Afrika Agrofood posture!
